ABSTRACT

The distribution of grades awarded in the spring at the senior colleges and community colleges of The City University of New York during the period 1971-74 is reported. The data are presented with the aim of providing administrators, department chairmen and other faculty members, especially those concerned with academic and discipline development, with information over time. The statistics were provided by the colleges and then retabulated by the CUNY Office of Program and Policy Research for inclusion in this report. They fail to identify overall trends in the awarding of grades at CUNY. Rather, the granting of grades appears to be the result of the policies, practices, and personnel of the individual colleges and the departments within them. A pattern of grade inflation, noted in recent years at other higher education institutions, is not evident for the colleges of CUNY. (LBH)

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The efforts of many individuals made this report possible. The CUNY Office of University Management Data collected the data and served as liaison between the OPPER and the colleges. Also, most of the colleges assigned a person to comment upon the tabulations concerning their institution which were submitted for prepublication review. Staff from the OPPER spent many hours in retabulation and verification of the data. In particular, we wish to acknowledge the efforts of Jerzy Warman, Rena Botwinick, Susan Loveland, and Sigrid Hess. Needless to say, the authors are responsible for any errors or omissions in the final report.

INTRODUCTION

This report concerns the distribution of grades awarded in the Spring at the senior colleges and community colleges of The City University of New York during the period 1971-1974.¹ (An earlier report (Kramer, Kaufman, and Podell, 1974) described the distribution of grades in the Spring 1972 semester.) The primary purpose of this report is to provide administrators, department chairmen and other faculty members, especially those concerned with academic and discipline development, with data over time.

Data were provided by the colleges and then retabulated by the CUNY Office of Program and Policy Research for inclusion in the report. The data and the interpretations which may derive from them are subject to several caveats.

- (1) The data are only as accurate as the information submitted by the colleges to the CUNY Office of Management Data.
- (2) Grade distributions for several of the colleges reflect the grades reported immediately following the end of the semester; those grades subject to change, e.g., "incomplete" and "absent from final examination," have not been updated.

- (3) Grade distributions are not presented for all academic departments at a college. The departments selected were those that could be found at all colleges and whose courses enrolled enough students for meaningful percentaging.
- (4) The multi-department "subject area" clusters utilized in the report may differ from those found at the colleges. Philosophy, for example, has been placed in the "humanities" cluster, but at some colleges it is considered part of the social sciences.
- (5) The colleges of CUNY vary considerably -- departments with the same name at different colleges vary in their course offerings, enrollments, teaching methods, and faculty qualifications; enrolled students vary in terms of their previous preparation and college objectives; and there are intra-and inter-college variations in grading practices and policies.² These variations (and others) are relevant to any attempt to explain the reasons for or the meaning of described differences.

SENIOR COLLEGES*

The percentage distribution of superior (A and B) grades and failing (F and miscellaneous failure³) grades for selected departments⁴ is presented in Table 1. (Distributions for individual grades are provided in Appendix A.) The following observations may be made regarding this table:

- The departments within each college differed markedly in the proportions of superior and failing grades they awarded between 1971-1974 -- these grades fluctuated in some departments, in others they were stable, while in still others downward or upward trends were evident.
- There was a wide range in the percentage of superior and failing grades granted by like-named departments in the different colleges. (For example, from 1971 to 1974 over 80 percent of the Brooklyn College education department grades were A-B while the same grades in the York College education department declined from 82 percent in 1971 to 49 percent in 1974.)

*Richmond College does not award the usual A-D and F grades and Lehman College could only provide grades for all undergraduate students. Their grade distributions are omitted from Tables 1 and 2 but are shown in Appendices A and B.

- Between 1971-1974, superior grades declined in more (14 of 16) departments at York College than at the other colleges.

The percentage distribution of superior and failing grades for multi-department subject areas⁵ is presented in Table 2. (The distribution of individual grades is contained in Appendix B.) The following observations may be made regarding the data of Table 2:

- The percent of superior grades was usually smallest in the science-mathematics area.
- Between 1971-1974, Queens College led the others in the percent of superior grades awarded in foreign languages, humanities, and social sciences.
- Between 1972-1974, John Jay College led others in the percent of failing grades awarded in foreign languages, humanities, and social sciences.
- At Baruch, City, Hunter, John Jay, and York Colleges, the percent of failing grades increased in all subject areas.

(City College also provided data on average grades by students' class standing.⁶ These data are contained in Appendix D for the years 1967, 1972, and 1974.)

COMMUNITY COLLEGES*

Because departmental organization differed too widely between the community colleges and changed too much over time, their grade distributions were tabulated only by "subject areas."⁷ Table 3 presents the percentage distribution of superior and failing grades.⁸ (The percentage distributions of individual grades are contained in Appendix C.) Some general observations may be made from this table:

-- From 1971-1974, Borough of Manhattan Community College was the only one in which the percentage of superior grades decreased and the percentage of failing grades increased in every "subject area."

-- At Queensborough Community College the percentage of failing grades in every "subject area," with the exception of nursing, decreased.

*Hostos and LaGuardia Community Colleges have atypical grading systems; their distributions are not included in Table 3, but are contained in Appendix C.

CONCLUSION

The data contained in this report fail to identify overall trends in the awarding of grades at CUNY. Rather, the granting of grades appears to be the result of the policies, practices, and personnel of the individual colleges and the departments within them. A pattern of grade inflation, noted in recent years at other higher education institutions (Juola, 1974; Scully, 1975), is not evident for the colleges of CUNY.

¹At Kingsborough in 1971, there were no Failing or Miscellaneous Failing grades given. ²At Borough of Manhattan, Technology de Health Technology.

1. All students, matriculated and nonmatriculated, undergraduate and graduate, who were enrolled in undergraduate day session courses of the colleges are included in the data of this report. The one exception to this is Lehman College, which could only provide data for undergraduate students rather than for undergraduate day session courses.
2. For example, three of the CUNY colleges do not use the traditional A-D and F grading system. Also, it is the policy of some of the colleges not to give F grades to first-time freshmen.
3. Failing grades consist of the usual F grade along with those miscellaneous grades reported as failures in the data provided to the OPR. The miscellaneous failures (MF) reported by the colleges were: at Baruch College, G (drop due to poor scholarship) and H (failure due to excessive absence); at Brooklyn College, G (failure with penalty), H (failure due to absence), and M (course taken without authorization); at City College, G (drop for unsatisfactory scholarship) and H (drop due to excessive absence); at Evers College, WF (withdrawal with penalty); at Hunter College, FW (failure due to unofficial or unapproved withdrawal) and NCR (no credit); at Jay College there were no miscellaneous fail grades; at Lehman College, J (failure for nonacademic reasons) and WU (withdrawal unofficially); at Queens College, J (failure for unofficial withdrawal); at Richmond College, X (withdrawing with failure) and I (an incomplete which counts as a failure until made-up); at York College, X (failure given to freshmen) and WF and Z (withdraw with failure).
4. Included in Table 1 is a department titled Romance Languages. In fact, of the colleges listed in Table 1, this department only exists at Hunter College; however, a "comparable" department was "created" at the other colleges by combining the data for separate departments. Included at Baruch, City, and Queens Colleges are French, Italian, Portuguese, and Spanish; at Brooklyn, Jay, and York Colleges are French, Italian, and Spanish; at Evers College are French and Spanish.
5. Senior college multi-department subject areas were defined as follows:

Foreign Languages

Baruch: French, German, Hebrew, Italian, Portuguese, Russian, Spanish

Brooklyn: Chinese, French, German, Greek, Hebrew,
Italian, Latin, Russian, Spanish
City: Chinese, French, German, Greek, Hebrew,
Italian, Latin, Portugese, Russian, Yiddish
Evers: French, Spanish
Hunter: German, Hebrew, Romance Languages, Russian

[Note: Chinese is also taught at Hunter College but is offered through the Classics department.]

Jay: French, Italian, Spanish
Lehman: Chinese, Greek, Hebrew, Latin, German and Slavic Languages, Romance Languages
Queens: Chinese, French, German, Greek, Hebrew,
Italian, Latin, Portugese, Russian, Spanish,
Swedish, Yiddish
Richmond: Language courses are offered through the Humanities Division
York: French, German, Greek, Hebrew, Italian, Latin,
Russian, Spanish

Humanities

Baruch: Art, Comparative Literature, English, Music, Philosophy, Speech
Brooklyn: Art, Classics, Comparative Literature, English,

Brooklyn: Biology, Chemistry, Geology, Mathematics, Physics
City: Astronomy, Biology, Chemistry, Geology, Earth and Planetary Science, Mathematics, Physics
Evers: Biology, Chemistry, Mathematics, Physics, Science
Hunter: Biology, Chemistry, Geology and Geography, Mathematics, Physics and Astronomy, Physical Science
Jay: Biology, Chemistry, College Science, Mathematics, Physics
Lehman: Biology, Chemistry, Geology, Mathematics, Physics and Astronomy
Queens: Biology, Chemistry, Earth and Environmental Science, Mathematics, Physics
Richmond: Biology, Chemistry, Computer Science, Engineering Science, Environmental Health Science, Geology, Mathematics, Physics, Science and Society
York: Biology, Chemistry, Geology, Mathematics, Natural Science, Physical Science, Physics

Special multi-department subject areas are as follows:

Business

Baruch: Accounting, Advertising, Business Policy, Finance, Insurance, International Trade, Law, Management, Marketing, Materials/Commerce, Real Estate, Retailing

Engineering

City: Chemical Engineering, Civil Engineering,
Electrical Engineering, Graphics, Mechanical
Engineering

Law and Police Science

Baruch: Correction Administration, Forensic Science,
Law, Police Science

6. At City College the average grade is based on the following five point scale: A=4.0, B=3.0, C=2.0, D=1.0, F,G,H=0.0
7. Community College multi-department subject areas were defined as follows:

Business

BMCC: Accounting, Advertising, Banking and Finance,
Business Administration, Marketing, Retailing,
Secretarial Science
BXCC: Accounting, Business, Finance, Law, Retailing
(Marketing), Secretarial Studies, Shorthand,
Typing, Business Communications

ment/Philosophy

Mathematics at each college includes only the Mathematics
Department

Science

BMCC: Biology, Chemistry, Physics, Science
BXCC: Biology, Chemistry, Physics
Hostos CC: Biology, Physical Science
KCC: Biology, Chemistry, Geology, Physics,
Science (Biology), Science (Physics)
NYCCC: Biological Sciences (Medical Laboratory Technology), Chemistry and Chemical Technology,
Physics and General Science
QCC: Biology, Chemistry, Physics
SICC: Biological Sciences, Chemistry, Physics and Geology

Nursing at each college includes only the Nursing Department

Technology

BMCC: Electrical Technology, Mechanical Technology
NYCCC: Architecture, Architectural Technology, Construction Technology, Civil Technology, Elec-tromechanical Technology, Electrical Technology,
Mechanical Technology, Environmental Science
Technology
QCC: Electrical Technology, Mechanical Technology
SICC: Electrical Technology, Mechanical and Civil Technology.

Health Technology

BMCC: Inhalation Therapy, Respiratory Therapy,
Medical Emergency Technology, Community Mental Health, Medical Record Technology
Hostos CC: Medical Secretarial Science, Radiology Technology,
Dental Hygiene, Health Care, Medical Laboratory
Technology

8. Miscellaneous failures (MF) reported by the community colleges were: at Borough of Manhattan CC, FA (failure due to excessive absence), J (failure for non-academic reasons), WF (withdrawal failing), and WU (withdrawal unofficial); at Bronx CC there are no miscellaneous fail grades; at Hostos CC there are no miscellaneous fail grades; at Kingsborough CC, WF (withdrawal with penalty); at LaGuardia CC, there are no miscellaneous fail grades; at New York City CC, WF (withdrawal while failing); at Queensborough CC, WF (failure due to excessive absence) and UF (withdrawal with failure); at Staten Island CC, H (failure due to excessive absence), G (drop with failure for unsatisfactory scholarship), R (academic proficiency not demonstrated), and X (academic proficiency not demonstrated due to excessive absences).
